Launch Your Clothing Brand with Confidence

Brandit relied heavily on manual WhatsApp orders. The challenge was to design a platform that drives traffic to the website, converted inquiries into orders, and showcased the broader scope of their services—without sacrificing clarity or brand consistency but utilizing the brands identity.

Ordering through WhatsApp felt fast, until it wasn't The Brandit Store was designed with respects to the customer's time while lifting the brand's credibility.

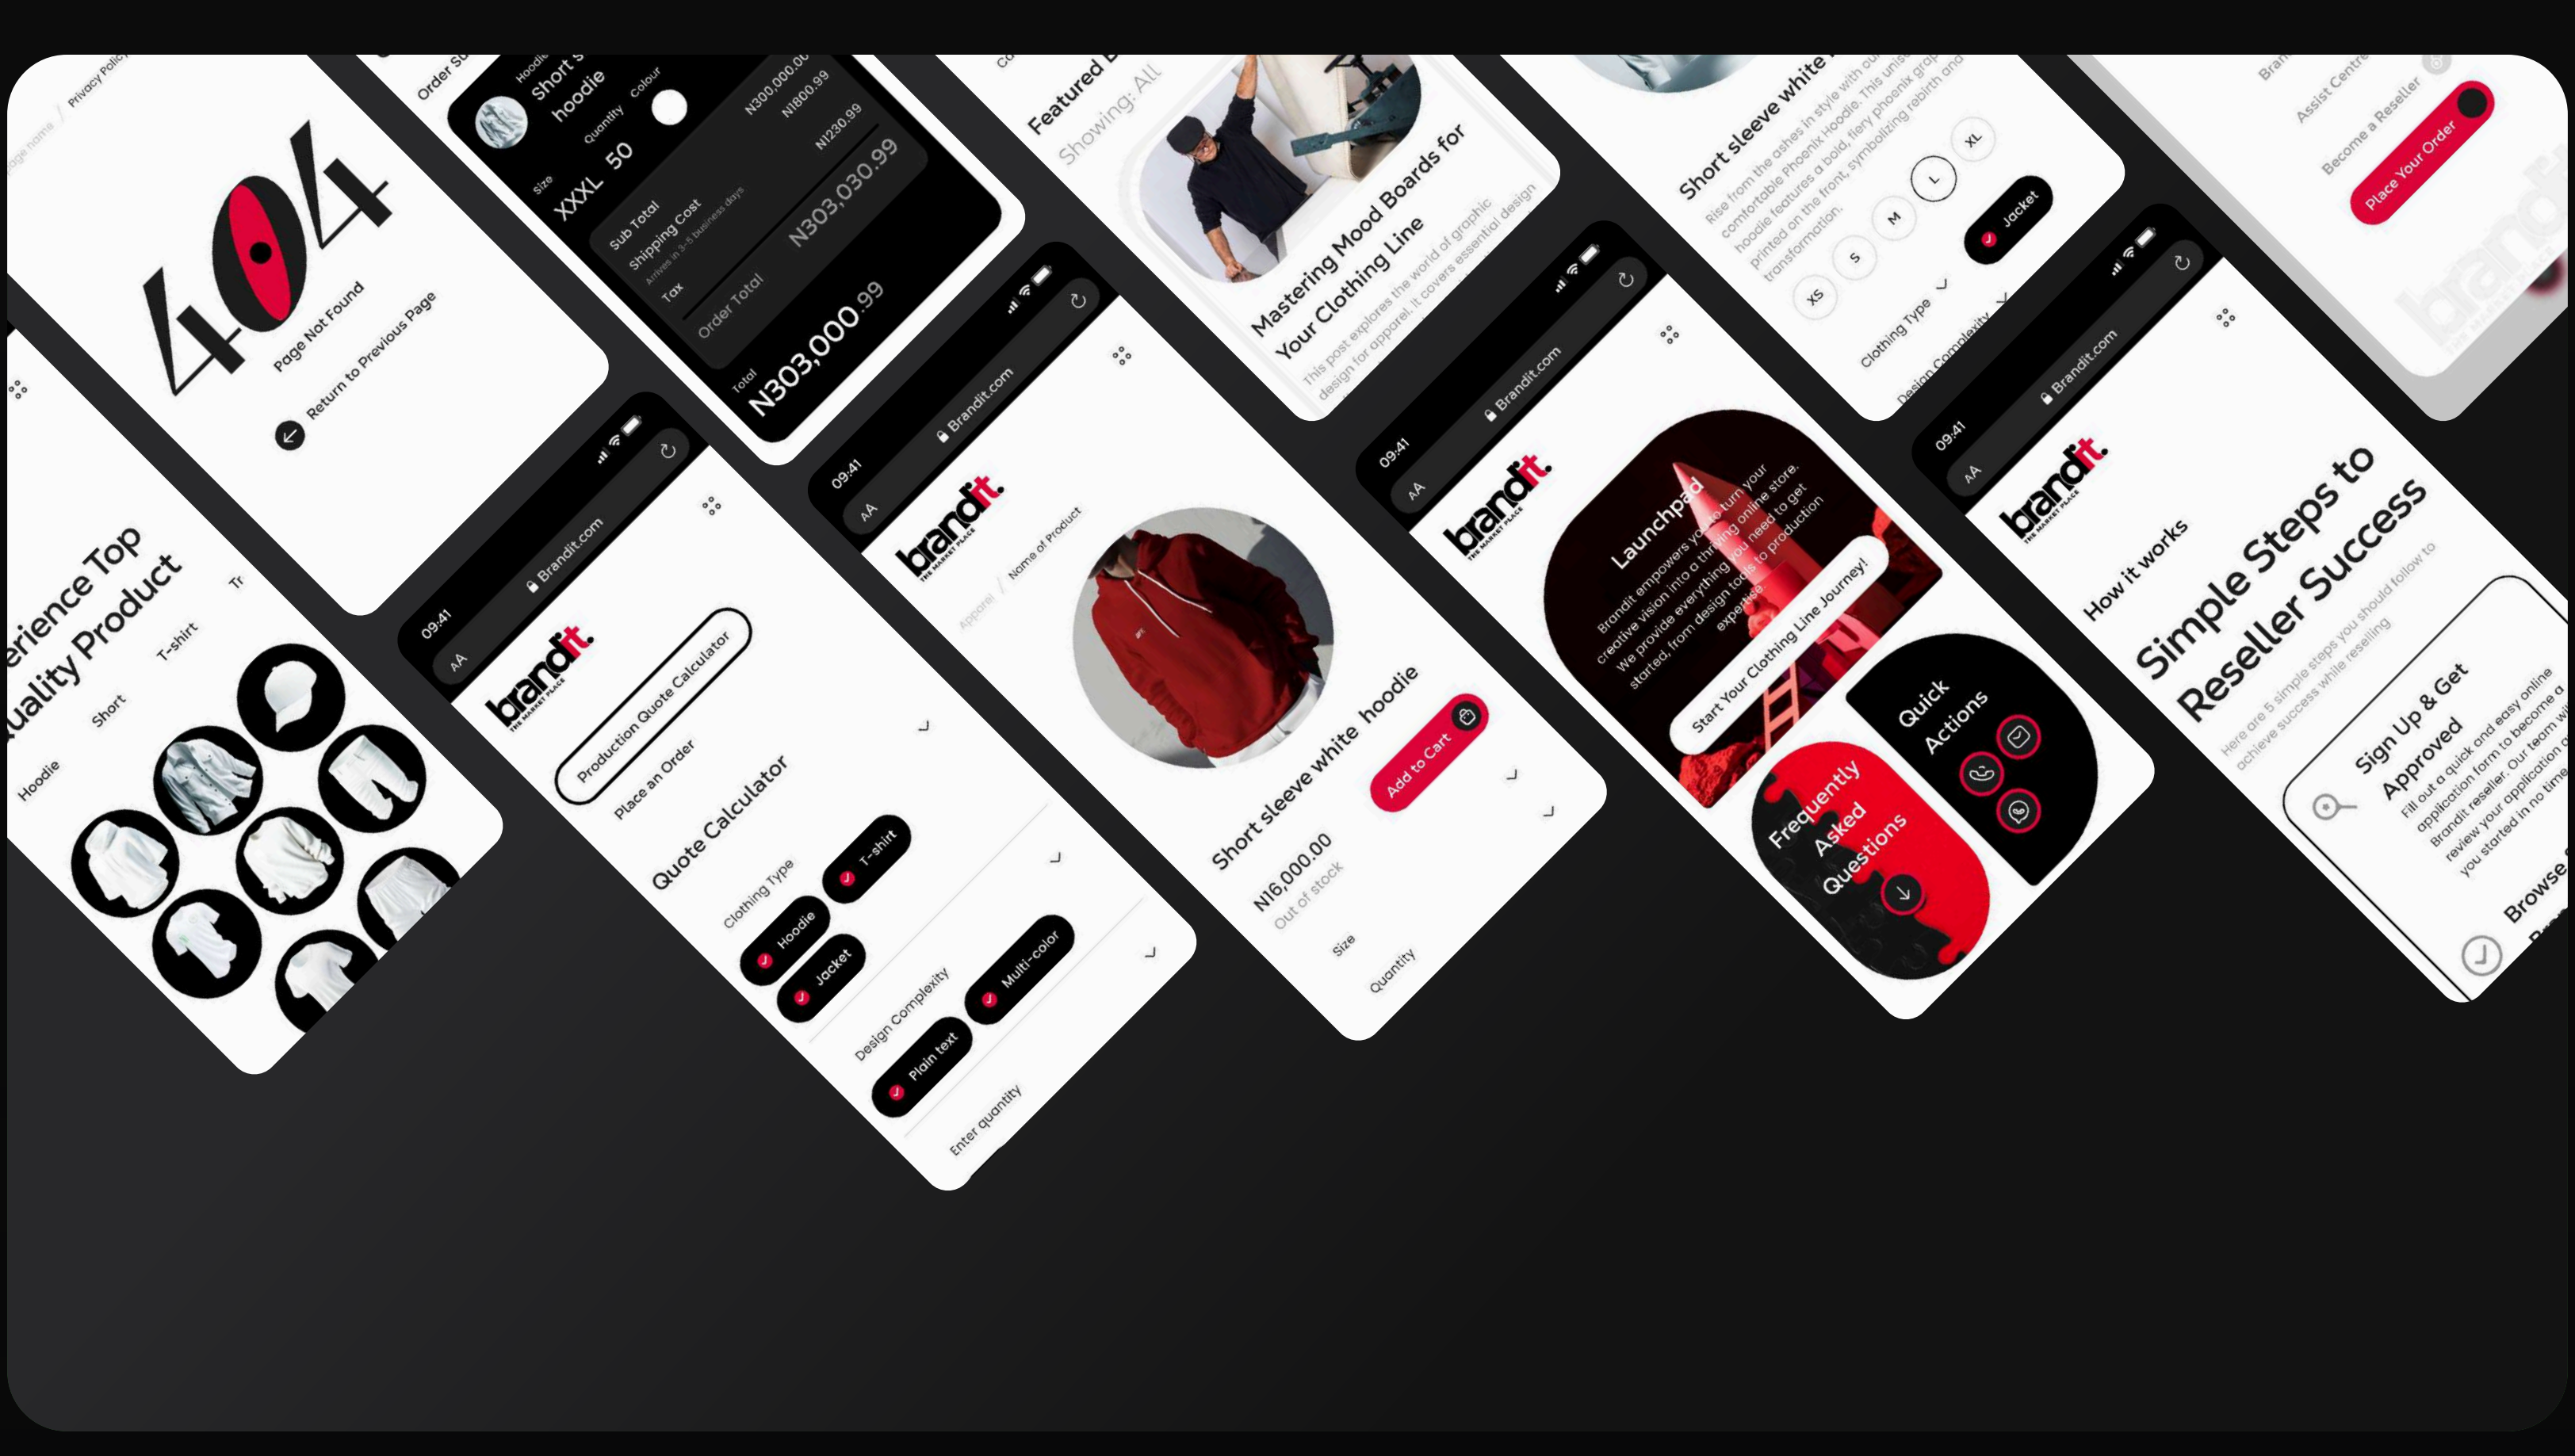
The layout wasn't just aesthetic, it was intentional. Every section now works harder to tell the story, showcase the product, and earn the click



Building a full-blown e-commerce site taught me that cutting features and polishing core flows creates the biggest business impact Before, most customer interactions required manual responses through DMs, which slowed down the buying process. We transformed the experience into a self-service platform that allows users to explore, decide, and shop without needing constant back-and-forth.
